“We have to make sure, that we as a state are doing everything possible to ensure that our injured Guard, Reserve and Active Duty military Veterans receive the best possible treatment when they come back to West Virginia.”

- Delegate Barbara Evans Fleischauer

We all know from watching the news just how dangerous life in Afghanistan and Iraq can be for our brave troops.

In the blink of an eye, lives can change. For returning West Virginia veterans, they face the physical challenges of rehabilitation. For others, they have to deal with the scars of battle that you can't see: the stress of combat, the pain of seeing comrades fall.

Our veterans have given their best. They deserve our best in return.

Delegate Fleischauer led the fight to reach out to our veterans, to ask them if they were getting the help they need.

So when the legislative survey of 6,000 West Virginia veterans came back saying that 48% had symptoms of PTSD or depression and were not getting the help they needed, Delegate Barbara Evans Fleischauer stepped up to the plate.

Barbara pushed for and got additional funding for training mental health care providers in rural areas. She helped get $600,000 placed in the budget to pay for transportation of veterans to their medical appointments.
