The West Virginia Disability Rights Center launched its Disability Law Institute series with the Disability Employment Institute. The conference was held the past two days at the Waterfront Place Hotel.

Gov. Joe Manchin (center) attended a portion of Wednesday's session. The keynote speaker for the event was Commissioner Christine M. Griffin (right), Equal Employment Opportunities Commission.

The Institute included a track for attorneys; a track for people with disabilities, their families and advocates; and a track for employers. Session topics included Legal Ethics, Handling ADA Employment Cases and Workers with Disabilities.

The conference was funded in partnership with the West Virginia Developmental Disabilities Council and the CED.
